

I first became interested in Archaeology in the 1960's and was invited to join the NVRC in 1971 – I became Secretary in 1973 remaining in post for the next forty years as well as becoming Secretary of NVAT in 1986.

My top experiences are a) being able to teach the subject I love b) being Chief Examiner for GCSE Archaeology and c) helping lead the excavation of the Roman town at Ashton.

I was involved in most of the NVRC excavations in the Peterborough area as well as those conducted by the Middle Nene Archaeological Group which I helped to form in 1971. For many years I was involved in the NVRC archaeological exhibitions at the annual Peterborough Show. In the past I have given talks/lectures to various local groups and run evening classes in 'A' level Archaeology.

My current interests are mainly centred on Oundle Museum where I am Chairman of the Management Committee.
